

The face of South Africa By Stephen Pryke

St Michael's Church is a meeting point for the community of Boston in the KwaZulu-Natal Midlands. Situated in green rolling hills between Howick and Bulwer, Boston is a little-known village surrounded by lush dairy farms. The church, like the village, is small but picturesque; so small, that at one wedding in this popular venue, there was no room for a table for the signing of the register, so the bride and the groom ended up resting the register on one another's backs! The daisies, which need to be weeded out from time to time, create a bright display in early summer between the graves of the original settlers
